Jacob Neff of No. 1111 Lynca street appeared as the prosecuting witness against his father, John Neff, in the First District Police Court, yesterday morning, Mary Neff; wife of the defendant, was also a witness against him. The prisoner was charged with disturbing the peace.

The elder Neff is employed by an undertaking firm and earns a good salary, Though a good husband on weekdays, his wife says that he is a regular tyrant on Sunday. On that day, according to her testimony and that of her son, he invariably gets drunk and proceeds to demoiish everything in sight and abuse every member of the family. His wife said that this habit he contracted twenty sections of the results of contracted twenty-seven years ago. Tiring of his conduct, his family came to the conclusion that a fine would do him good. On Sunday, it is said, he came home under the influence of liquor and started to make things hom. so disposed would continue to deal with the brokers, only the transaction would be more extensive and the ensuing demoralization more widespread.

There is, however, another side to this question. If associations such as the one in question are of value in the maintenance of rates, very much more serious consideration should be given the question of withdrawal than seems to be at present the case. A deal with a tichet broker may cause a comparatively small loss as well as considerable annoyance to those lines which refuse to pursue similar tactics, but the withdrawal from an association is tantamount to a free-for-all scramble, the effect of which is infinitely more detrimental to general railroad revenue than any number of such deals as were answerable for the withdrawal. It is provoking to find that an agreement made upon good faith between roads is more or less frequently violated, but it is of a great deal more consequence that the revenues of the railroads shall be as nearly as possible preserved than it is that the general passenger agent shall be able to maintain an unruffied spirit.

Shreveport, La., Sept. 10.—A suit was filed here to-day by citizens of Red River Parish for annulment of a five-mill tax for ten years, voted in 1888, in aid of the conten years, voted in 1888, in aid of the con-struction of the Shreveport and Red River Railroad. Fetitioners allege that two-im-portant conditions stipulated in the grant of the subsidy have not been compiled with. The road enanged to build to Conshatta, making that place the terminus, but has extended far beyond that point. The rail-road has also failed in its agreement to keep a steamboat in the Red River trade.

Will Build Snaitary Cars. Will Build Snaitary Cars.

Owing to a conviction that the railway coach, as at present constructed, is ufmanitary, the managements of the Chesapeake and Ohio and of the Big Four roads have decided to experiment with a new kind of carriage. Greek have been given by both companies for the construction of coaches which shall conform as nearly as possible to the recommendations of the Railway Surgeons' Association. According to the view of the latter, there are many things in the modern coach which might tend to catch dirt, and filth and retain it, and also many secure hiding places for a thousand and one disease germs. The plainer the build inside and the less decoration and finery a coach contains the better for those who travel.

Conductors Did Not Strike Conductors Did Not Strike.

A settlement has been reached between the Canadian Pacific Rallway and the conductors and trainmen of the Ontario and Quebec divisions. This settlement is in the nature of a compromise. The men expected more than they have been offered; the company has given more than it at first proposed. For instance, the senior freight conductors receive per 100 miles $2.70, instead of $2.50, as heretofore; the yardmen are given an increase of 15 per cent, but the passenger conductors, brakemen and trainmen, who also asked for an increase, remain as they were, the company not being able to see its way to give an increase at present.
